South India in the spotlight at Montgomery College

Dec. 5, 2002
 Bernice August

The Marriott Hospitality Center at Montgomery College will present "An Evening of South Indian Cuisine" at 6:30 p.m. Monday in the Faculty-Staff Dining Room of the Campus Center Building. Chef Vinod of Rockville's Bombay Bistro Restaurant will prepare mulligatawny soup (a traditional curry-flavored soup from Madras); oothapam (savory pancakes made with a fermented batter of lentils and rice); alleppy fish curry (fish stewed in coconut milk with shredded ginger, kokum and curry leaves); chicken pepper chettinad (hot and spicy chicken with Tellicherry peppercorns); Syrian lamb fry (boneless lamb with cinnamon, cloves, cardamom and fennel); avial (assorted vegetables cooked with coconut, cumin, hot pepper and yogurt); makham cholam keerai masial (corn, greens and lentils with garlic and spices); white rice and tamarind rice; kaalan (yogurt with winter melon and spices) and semiya payasam (vermicelli pudding with raisins and nuts).

The dinner, is cosponsored by the International Education Program, includes a component tasting of spices and other traditional Indian ingredients. The cost is $22 per person. To check if space is still available or to request disability-related accommodations, e-mail Julie Zagars at jzagars@mc.cc.md.us or call 301-251-7914. The Montgomery College campus is located at 51 Mannakee St., Rockville.

What's in a name? Why do established restaurants change their names when nothing else has changed? Sometimes it is because someone else has a prior stake in that name. Nora's Mediterranean Grill (800 Pleasant Dr., in King Farm, 301-926-7855) found that out after coming up against Nora Pouillon whose eponymous restaurant is famous in D.C. and beyond for its organic fare. The Rockville restaurant is now called Kardo. Café Roval (9812 Falls Road, 301-299-3000) in Potomac Village is sporting a new moniker as well. As Picasso, it is perhaps more in tune with owner Fritz Siegfried's other artistic dining endeavor, Matisse on upper Wisconsin Avenue in the district. New China Kitchen (12710 Twinbrook Parkway, 301-881-4500) in Rockville has been rechristened Mandarin East, a more appealing name for the place where dim sum carts make the rounds on weekends. Kitchen just didn't do it justice, a spokesman says.
